The very simple technology of building from bamboo sticks and rubber-bands showed how something weak can become strong, and showed that collaborative work and process is more important than a perfect product.

Simple materials allowed us to invite local citizens to work with us ... they offered their help and told us more stories of their own. The objects that were merely there to evoke the spirit of the town soon became a very popular and much appreciated addition.