Contributors

Jennifer R. Beckett is Lecturer in the School of Culture and Communication at the University of Melbourne, Australia. She is a researcher, writer and social commentator who works in the fields of public communication, social media, cinema and the psychology of trauma.

Jordana Blejmar is Research Associate at the University of Liverpool. Originally, a literature graduate from the Universidad de Buenos Aires, she was awarded an MPhil and a PhD (as a Gates Scholar) at the University of Cambridge. She is a member of the steering committee of the Centre for the Study of Cultural Memory (London). She has curated art exhibitions in Buenos Aires, Liverpool and Paris. Her current research focuses on the material culture of childhood, ludic art and playful memories of trauma in Latin America.

Klāra Brūveris is a specialist in Latvian film, and has a doctorate on that subject. She has taught at the University of New South Wales (UNSW Australia) as Teaching Fellow, and is currently living in Sydney. She is the founding director of the Baltic Film Festival in Australia. Her contribution to this book was partly funded by the Australian Research Council (as a Research Associate).

Susan Danta has over fifteen years of experience in the film and television industry and has received numerous awards for her animated short films, including Heirlooms (2010), Mother Tongue (2003), Driving Home (1999) and Shadowplay (1999). Susan has exhibited at the National Portrait Gallery, Canberra (animated self-portrait exhibition); Australian Centre for the Moving Image (Australian Culture Now); The Fourth Gwangju Biennale, South Korea (Seeing There – Diasporic Sites); and the Smithsonian Institute. Susan is currently completing a practice-based doctorate at UNSW Australia.

Greg Dolgoplov is Senior Lecturer in Film at UNSW Australia. He is director of the Vision Splendid Outback Film Festival and the Russian Resurrection Film Festival. His research interests include post-Soviet cinema, Soviet film stars, Film Festival Studies and Australian contemporary cinema, especially crime representations. Greg has written on Indigenous cinema for Metro Magazine.

Victoria Flanagan is Senior Lecturer in Children's Literature at Macquarie University. She is the author of Into the Closet: Cross-Dressing and the Gendered Body in Children's Literature and Film (2008) and Technology and Identity in Young Adult Fiction: The Posthuman Subject (2014). Her research focuses on representations of gender and subjectivity in children's literature and film, and the role of social media in Young Adult fiction.

Stephanie Hemelryk Donald is ARC Future Fellow and Professor of Comparative Film at UNSW Australia. She is the overseas Principal Investigator on the Leverhulme Trust Childhood and Nation in World Cinema network. Recent articles on Chinese art history and cinema have been published in Affirmations of the Modern, Asian Studies Review, Theory Culture and Society, and New Formations. Her next monograph, There's No Place Like Home, based on the Dorothy Project, concerns child migration and film.

Maria Elena Indelicato has an MA in Media and Communication Studies (Sapienza University of Rome) and a PhD in Gender and Cultural Studies (University of Sydney). She is currently Lecturer and International Vice-Director of the Huallywood Film Research Center, Department of Media and Communication, Ningbo Institute of Technology, Zhejiang University.

Hannah Kilduff is completing her PhD at the University of Cambridge. She is interested in representations of intimacy and the senses in French and Franco-Maghrebian films. She has published on mourning and intermediality in contemporary French fiction.

Jan Lániček is Lecturer in Jewish History at UNSW Australia. He focuses on Modern European history, the Holocaust and Jewish/non-Jewish relations in modern East-Central Europe. He is the author of Czechs, Slovaks and the Jews, 1938-1948 (2013) and co-editor of Governments-in-Exile and the Jews during the Second World War (2013).

Michael Lawrence is Reader in Film Studies at the University of Sussex. He is the author of Sabu (2014) and the editor, with Laura McMahan, of Animal Life and the Moving Image (2015) and, with Karen Lury, of The Zoo and Screen Media: Images of Exhibition and Encounter (2016). His articles have appeared in Screen, Adaptation and Journal of British Cinema and Television. He is currently working on a book called The Children and the Nations: Juvenile Actors, Hollywood Cinema and Humanitarian Sentiment, 1940-1960.

Vicky Lebeau has published widely in the field of psychoanalysis and visual culture. Her work is deeply engaged by the power of the image – be it visual or verbal – in public discourse, with a particular focus on contemporary discussion of the welfare state. Her recent publications include ‘Aphanisis: Patricia Williams and Ernest Jones,’ Psychoanalysis, Culture and Society 20, no. 2 (2015) and she is currently working on the issue of class difference and psychoanalysis.

Zitong Qiu is Associate Professor and member of the Huallywood Film Research Center, School of Media and Design, Ningbo Institute of Technology, Zhejiang University. She has published ‘Research notes towards a definition of Huallywood’ in the Journal of Chinese Cinemas (2016) and ‘Doing Chinese cultural industries: A reflection on the Blue Book syndrome and remedy paradigm’ in Handbook of Cultural and Creative Industries in China (2016).

Stefan Solomon is a postdoctoral researcher in Film at the University of Reading. He is currently analysing the intermedial connections between cinema and the visual arts in the Tropicália movement in Brazil, and considering how the combinations of different media contributed to ideas about cultural spectatorship and participation over several decades. His publications include a co-edited volume, William Faulkner in the Media Ecology (2015), and a forthcoming monograph, William Faulkner in Hollywood: Screenwriting for the Studios (2017).

Emma Wilson is Professor of French Literature and the Visual Arts at the University of Cambridge and a Fellow of Corpus Christi College. She is a partner in the Childhood and Nation in World Cinema research network. Her publications include Cinema’s Missing Children (2003), Alain Resnais (2006), Atom Egoyan (2009) and Love, Mortality and the Moving Image (2012).

She is the author of The Trickster-Function in the Theatre of Garcia Lorca (2000), Tales of Seduction: The Figure of Don Juan in Spanish Culture (2007, 2012) and The Child in Spanish Cinema (2013) as well as articles on Spanish theatre, cinema and cultural studies and Chilean film.

Acknowledgements

We start by acknowledging the financial support for our research provided by two organisations, the Leverhulme Trust and the Australian Research Council (ARC). The Leverhulme Trust funds our Research Network, Childhood and Nation in World Cinema: Borders and Encounters since 1980. The Trust also awarded the International Fellowship that brought Stephanie Hemelryk Donald to the University of Leeds in 2012 to work on children, migration and film. An ARC Future Fellowship (FT110100007) has not only enabled Professor Hemelryk Donald to work on this project, but also co-funded Zitong Qiu and Klára Brůveris to participate as associate researchers in 2013–14.

We are grateful for the support provided by our universities: Royal Holloway, University of London (Sarah Wright), the Centre for Research in the Arts, Social Sciences and Humanities at the University of Cambridge (Emma Wilson), and the iCinema Research Centre and the School of Humanities and Languages at UNSW Australia (Stephanie Hemelryk Donald). We also acknowledge Ningbo Institute of Technology, and Zitong Qiu, our fourth partner.

The beginnings of this collection lie in the collegiality of academic friends and the three editors thank Andrew Webber, Lúcia Nagib and Duncan Wheeler for introducing us to each other. The Childhood and Nation in World Cinema network has organized a number of symposia and workshops in the UK, China and Australia, and we would like to thank all the speakers, discussants and participants – not least, the postgraduates who attended the Cambridge workshop in 2015 – for the contribution they have made, directly or indirectly, to this book. The Network and the Fellowship have also undertaken filmmaking projects with school students in China, the UK and Australia. Mark Reid, David Edgar and Christine James at the British Film Institute have made a tremendous contribution to that work, and we particularly thank (and applaud) the BFI project students at Birkenhead Sixth Form College and the students from Fairfield, Sydney who shared their films with us in 2014.

We also thank the people who helped make good things happen, either through their generosity or their comradeship, or all that plus hard work: Bill Burgwinkle, Jordana Blejmar, Ian Crook, Sebastian Secker-Walker, Lydia Daniels, Leisha Wickham, Anar Dale; and of course the filmmakers, artists and writers who have talked to us: Sophie Mayer, Sophie Hyde, Dennis Del Favero, and Alina Marazzi.

We thank our families – especially our own mothers who worked so hard to bring us through our own childhoods, and our own children whose amazing lives and fabulous energy constantly remind us of our good fortune in a difficult world.

Finally, we acknowledge the indefatigable Sofia Mason, an organizer sans pareil who as Leverhulme Network Facilitator has redefined the meaning of commitment. We all faced trials and challenges during the months in late 2015 when this volume was coming to fruition. Without Sofia's work, and latterly Lidia Merás's editorial care, the book would not exist.
